Ombudsman 'advocacy' puts Navy personnel first

FROM THE NAS KEY WEST FLEET AND FAMILY SUPPORT CENTER

In celebration of Ombudsman Appreciation Day, Key West ombudsmen were treated to a luncheon at the Fleet and Family Support Center on Sigsbee Park Wednesday. The luncheon was to honor local ombudsmen as well as to celebrate the Navy Family Ombudsman Program's 35 years of service to the military community. The Appreciation Day recognizes the sacrifice ombudsmen make to keep the lines of communication open between commands and families.

"You are the number one advocate for the military personnel," said CMDMCM (SW/AW) Kraig Holubar, Naval Air Station (NAS)

Key West command master chief, guest speaker at the luncheon. "And you do it for free. If I could give you a paycheck, I would."

In countries all over the world, an ombudsman is on the telephone trying to help someone. Yet many people have never heard of an ombudsman or know their function within a command.

The ombudsman program was originated in Scandinavia and advocates were to communicate concerns and inform the citizens much like today's ombudsmen during deployments. In 1970, Adm. Elmo Zumwalt brought the Scandinavian concept to the Navy hoping to enhance the morale and welfare of the command families. Soon via OPNAVINST 1750, initiated in 1973 and revised in 1994, the program was with the commanding officer instructing all active duty and Naval Reserve commands to have an ombudsman.

Confidentiality is one of the principles of this program. People seek to talk to someone they know and are comfortable with. A breach of confidentiality is grounds for dismissal from the position except in five instances: potential or attempted suicide; suspected and established child abuse and neglect; established spouse abuse; alcohol and drug abuse; and potential homicidal behavior.

As an information and referral source an ombudsman can give information, which is continually updated, on community and Navy resources. This also helps the ombudsman act as a liaison linking command and families. For example, commands can pass information during deployment on ship's schedules and the status of command. Families can use their ombudsman to relay their concerns back to the command. Ombudsmen may communicate via phone trees, care lines or newsletters.

Local elections are important vote to military

BY JO1 (SW) TRICE DENNY

Elections for key positions in Key West city government offices are just around the corner, and Key West's military population is encouraged to get out and vote.

"People should realize how important it is to vote, even in local elections," said Naval Air Station (NAS) Key West Commanding Officer Capt. Jim Scholl. "In Key West, local elections can even affect the base's ability to exist on a positive or negative basis with the surrounding community."

This year, Key West voters will choose a mayor and four city commissioners. For military voters that live in base housing, the city commissioner race is on for District 1, which includes Trumbo Point, Peary Court, and Truman Annex, and District 2, which includes Sigsbee Park. The other two districts up for election are 3 and 6. Three includes Stock Island, the airport, and parts of New Town. Six is in the center of Old Town Key West.

City commissioners and the mayor have a direct impact on day to day lives in the city. Only by researching the candidates can a voter be confident that his or her city is run the way they would like it to be.

"People need to make sure that they make themselves smart about all of the candidates," said Scholl. "I also want supervisors to encourage voting and to give their people an opportunity to go place their vote."

Early voting will start Sept. 19 and run until election day, October 4. If voters want to vote early, they must go to the Supervisor of Elections office at 530 Whitehead St. from 8:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Saturday. On October 4, voting booths will be set up in each district throughout the city.

It is too late to register for this year's election if you have never registered to vote, according to the Monroe County Supervisor of Elections. However, if you register to vote before Oct. 3, you will be eligible to vote in any runoff that occurs from this election and every election thereafter.

For more information on Key West elections, voting eligibility, and voting booth locations, visit www.keys-elections.org or call 305-292-3416. To learn more about the Mayor's office and the Key West City Commission, visit www.keywestcity.com.

Comfort crew provides community relief effort

BY JOSN HEATHER WEAVER
USNS Comfort Public Affairs

PASCAGOULA, Miss. (NNS) — USNS Comfort (T-AH 20) Sailors have teamed up with Salvation Army volunteers to prepare care packages for residents of the Gulf Coast affected by Hurricane Katrina.

Crew members sifted through hundreds of bags and boxes filled with donations to ensure each care package was filled with the necessary supplies.

Beyond medical care to local residents and surrounding communities, the hospital ship also serves as a hotel service to volunteer relief workers.

“Our first goal is to meet the immediate needs of the people affected by this hurricane, such as providing food and water,” said Salvation Army Warehouse Supervisor Perry Balcom.

Balcom and many of the other volunteers are part of an organization known as Hope Force International. They are a 24-hour, quick-response team deployed to different aid organizations around the country in times of crisis.

Volunteer Mary Minton said having Comfort to assist in relief efforts is a huge blessing for volunteers and victims alike.

“It’s so wonderful to have Comfort in the area because the staff aboard the ships have their hearts in the same place as ours...we all have the same mission, and that’s to help the people who have been affected by this tragedy,” Minton said.

Beyond medical care to local residents and surrounding communities, the hospital ship also serves as a hotel service to volunteer relief workers. Minton, Balcom and several other volunteers stay aboard Comfort during their off hours.

“Not only have we been provided warm meals and a comfortable place to sleep,” Balcom said, “but we have been provid-

Navy warships carry city's name into battle through history

BY JAMES E. BROOKS

NAS Key West Public Affairs Officer

The name "Key West" is attached to a wide array of goods from designer clothing to key lime pie. In military history, three Navy warships bore the name of the southernmost city. The naming of Navy warships goes back to the formation of the Continental Navy on October 13, 1775. While there are no established rules on how ship names are assigned, protocol and political wranglings bestowed the name "Key West" on warships during the Civil War, World War II, and the Cold War.

The southernmost city was barely 40 years old when a wooden, steam-powered paddleboat, supporting the Union Army along the Tennessee River, carried the name into battle. The Key West was a "tinclad" with the number "35" painted on its side that escorted supply ships. Steam power also made her useful for hit-and-run attacks against Confederate forces using deck-mounted howitzers and riflemen. The Key West was barely a year old when the ship's luck ran out near Johnsonville, Tenn., on Nov. 3, 1864. After escorting barges from Kentucky with Union Army supplies, the highly regarded Confederate cavalry general Nathan Bedford Forrest attacked the Key West and other ships moored at a supply depot. The Key West was damaged by Confederate artillery but fought back. With ammunition running low and capture inevitable, Union forces set fire and scuttled Key West and several other ships. The Union loss at Johnsonville was the only time in history a cavalry unit defeated a naval force.

Despite the city of Key West's prominence as the "Gibraltar of the Caribbean" during the late 19th and early 20th centuries, another Navy warship wasn't christened "Key West" until World War II. On Dec. 29, 1943, the sister of Lt. Harold Felton, the first Key West resident lost in World War II, christened a patrol frigate with a bottle of champagne and formally dedicated the city's new namesake. While USS Key West (PF-17) was decidedly a Navy warship, the patrol frigate's first commanding officer was a Coast Guard Reserve officer. Because the Coast Guard was a part of the Navy during World War II, it wasn't unusual to find Navy ships' crews to be a mixture of Sailors and Coast Guardsmen. Such was the case with the Key West. After commissioning, Key West (PF-17) served as an escort ship for merchant ships bound from the east coast to the Mediterranean. By the end of World War II, the Key West was transferred to the Pacific and converted into a weather ship. She operated in and around the island of Guam, gathering weather information for forecasters. But like many warships built during the war, the patrol frigate's Navy service was short lived. In June 1946, Key West returned to the United States where she was decommissioned and sold to a salvage yard for scrap metal.

The southernmost city was barely 40 years old when a wooden, steam-powered paddleboat, supporting the Union Army along the Tennessee River, carried the name into battle.

On Sept. 12, 1987, a fast attack submarine became the third warship named for the southernmost city. The protocol for naming submarines changed under Adm. Hyman Rickover. Rickover understood politics' impacts on defense budgets and directed that attack submarines, previously named for fish, were to be named for American cities because "fish don't vote." USS Key West (SSN-722) was the 35th Los Angeles-class attack submarine built. The submarine made several deployments to the Mediterranean as well as a few visits here during its first decade of service. In 1996, the Key West transferred to the Pacific Fleet. Key West was the first U.S. warship on station during the initial phase of Operation Enduring Freedom and participated in the strike missions into Afghanistan. The Key West was also one of four submarines to launch cruise missiles into Iraq during the opening phases of Operation Iraqi Freedom. Key West remains in commission, based in Pearl Harbor.

What's in a name? The city of Key West has had its name labeled, stitched and stuck to many things. Above all, local residents can take great pride in knowing three Navy ships carried the city's name in battle during three wars.

Three Navy warships have been named after the Southernmost City. The first USS Key West was a "tinclad" that patrolled the Tennessee River (top), escorting Union supply barges and attacking Confederate forces. The second USS Key West (PF-17) was a patrol frigate (center) that escorted merchant ships and was a weather support ship during World War II. The patrol frigate was commanded by a Coast Guard Reserve officer and had a mixed crew of Sailors and Coast Guardsmen. Here the ship is launched in Lorain, Ohio. The most recent USS Key West (left) is a fast attack submarine based in Pearl Harbor, Hawaii. USS Key West (SSN-722) remains in commission.

‘Day of Play’ Turn off the TV and turn on the FUN!

BY JAIME PETERMAN

MWR Boys and Girls Club

The MWR Boys and Girls Club will be hosting a Day of Play, an event held October 1 from 3 to 5 p.m., as part of Nickelodeon Network’s Let’s Just Play Across America event. Let’s Just Play is a national grassroots campaign aimed at getting kids to shut off their televisions and engage in a more active and healthy lifestyle.

Throughout the day kids at the Boys and Girls Club will be participating in a variety of fun activities both outdoors and in the gymnasium. Some of these activities include - slip and slide, sponge dodge ball, relay races along with many others. The School Aged Care (SAC) program, between the ages of 5 to 10, will also be participating in the Day of Play, although theirs will be held on Friday, September 30, between 3 and 5 p.m.

For over five years the Boys and Girls Club of Key West, which serves over 300 youth from military families between the ages of 5 to 18, has been providing a destination for kids to play and feel safe. Creative and innovative programming by staff has given kids with disadvantaged circumstances fun and educational opportunities.

With the help of a National Advisory Committee, which includes NFL star Tiki Barber and hip hop sensation Romeo, Let’s Just Play is Nickelodeon’s long-term national campaign to get kids more involved in establishing and making choices towards a healthy lifestyle while having fun!

For more information or questions, please call Jaime at the Boys and Girls Club (305) 293-4437.

Humanitarian assistance at its finest

Impressive is the only word I can think of to describe the Navy's actions following hurricane Katrina! Every time I turn on the television or open a newspaper I see our Sailors doing incredible things for people they have never met. It's humanitarian assistance at its finest and I've never been more proud of what we, individually and collectively, bring to the table when people are in need. Most Americans are used to hearing about how the Navy helped out people in a foreign land. Today Americans are seeing our capability and generosity up close and personal. To every Sailor in the mix, my hat's off to you all. You are true champions and when you look in the mirror, you should feel very good about what you are doing to help other Americans.

Every day I read about the Navy's contribution to the relief effort. Currently (this may change by the time you read this) we have 19 ships operating either in the Gulf of Mexico or moored pierside. We are also flying more than 60 helicopters, almost around the clock, delivering anything and everything. Our Seabees are spread throughout our Gulf Coast bases and are working side-by-side with local people to help clear access, restore power and erect camps and facilities to provide the basics. Our medical teams are saving lives by the minute. I could go on and on about the units involved and I'd still end up missing someone. The bottom line is this team effort, accomplished by active duty and reserve Sailors, is making an immediate and tangible difference and our actions will have a lasting effect on the lives of people who have been thrust into an extremely difficult series of events.

The situation in the Gulf Coast is particularly difficult for our Navy because so many of our bases were also affected. When the evacuation orders were issued, many of our own fled the area.

I've never been more proud of what we, individually and collectively, bring to the table when people are in need. Most Americans are used to hearing about how the Navy helped out people in a foreign land. Today Americans are seeing our capability and generosity up close and personal.

We continue to track missing Sailors and the Navy's Helpline (877-414-5358) is staffed 24 hours per day. The number is for all Navy active duty, Reserve personnel, DoN civilians and family members. If you are in contact with someone from the region who has yet to check in and muster, please give him or her the number and have him or her call at once.

Navy Personnel Command has set up this helpline for Navy members and their families to call for information regarding their loved ones. This line is staffed by active-duty Navy volunteers and has connectivity with Navy, FEMA and other government agencies. They will try their very best to answer questions regarding the status of Navy members, but please be aware that communication in the region is still inconsistent.

To date, Americans are watching their military rise to the occasion here at home. From what I see, we have more than 19,000 military personnel supporting this effort; more than 10,000 alone are Sailors.

Another 45,500 Army and Air National Guard members are serving in the affected areas. Many people have already categorized the disaster as the biggest in our country's history. Although the majority of the people have been evacuated from the hardest-hit regions, there are still scores more who need our daily help for food, water, clothing, shelter, etc. Anyway you look at it, the recovery is going to take a long time and we (the Navy) will continue to respond as tasked. This is our charter - always has been, always will be.

As much as I like to boast about our Navy's efforts, I constantly remind myself we are a support organization. The overall lead on military support is U.S. Northern Command that just happens to be commanded by Adm. Keating. NORTHCOM is also a supporting organization as the Federal Emergency Management Agency (FEMA) is the overall lead and they are tasked with the daily assessment of needs and when the Navy provides a ship or unit to help, it's because FEMA has directed the military to perform certain tasks.

Our Navy was perhaps uniquely qualified to provide immediate support. When the hurricane hit, USS Bataan was operating in the Gulf of Mexico. She rode the storm out and as soon as the storm passed, she was on station and ready to respond. Although scheduled to return to Norfolk, the ship's orders were changed and she remained on station. I was delighted to learn that morale was characterized as "extremely high" because each and every crew member understood the need for their help and the reason they couldn't be released to go home. That's the type of spirit that some forget to mention. That's the type of spirit that bonds us as a Navy and that's the type of spirit that ensures we embody the term, "esprit de corps!"

All our ships and Sailors are providing incredible services, whether that is distributing food and water by LCAC or by staffing afloat hospitals to provide life-saving treatment to patients that might not otherwise get care.

When the recovery is complete, and the historians write about the military's response and ability to immediately make life better for the people of the Gulf Coast, I'm certain the Navy will be remembered as invaluable. Our Sailors have been responsive, aggressive, inventive, and above all, compassionate. To me, that was always a forgone conclusion, but to many Americans who have never found themselves on the receiving end of our support, they are gaining a first-hand impression that should last a lifetime.

Again Shipmates, I couldn't be more proud of your efforts. To each and every man and woman in our Navy who is either directly or indirectly supporting recovery efforts, I thank you from the bottom of my heart and encourage you to keep up the tremendous effort. All eyes are on you and you are showing our Navy in the most favorable light.

For those of you who may not be involved with the relief effort, I would remind you that our country remains at war in Iraq, Afghanistan and the horn of Africa and what you do is critical to that effort as well. None of us are on the sidelines. None of us are expendable. Today is a day to celebrate our unity and revel in the fact that when called, we answer - at home and abroad!

ed with several volunteers who are willing to do whatever it takes to get the job done."

"We're here to assist in the community any way we can. Since my job aboard the ship isn't in the medical field, I do whatever else I can to make a difference," said Machinist's Mate 2nd Class Jason Christian, an oxygen nitrogen production engineer aboard the ship. "It's terrible what happened here...our country needs us in any way possible. That's exactly what we're here for - to help."

"Community relations projects tie into the ship's mission of trying to do the most good for this community," said Comfort's Medical Treatment Facility's (MTF) Commanding Officer, Capt. Thomas Allingham.

"Comfort's Civil Mariners and military staff are voluntarily entering the community to clean up and restore neighborhoods, distribute food and clothing and provide care in relief efforts where we are most needed. Helping in any way possible is our main goal."

Back-to-back local hurricanes ruffle feathers of our high-flying friends

Stuart Garrison, volunteer at Exotic and Wild Bird Rescue releases a barn swallow after 48 hours of treatment. The bird had been hit by a car.

BY MAYA TOTMAN

Director, Exotic and Wild Bird Rescue of the Florida Keys

After barely recovering from Hurricane Dennis, Hurricane Katrina came and with her, more birds were disabled. Exotic and Wild Bird Rescue (EWBR) rescued: two ospreys, a red-bellied woodpecker, baby mourning doves, and a total of eight barn swallows. All birds were treated and successfully released.

I get many calls from people asking, "What are these little birds flying in zigzag patterns all around the Keys?!" The answer is barn swallows (Hirundo rustica). These graceful little birds were named for their affinity for the old wooden barns once found on many farms which they could enter and leave with ease through open doors, chinks in the walls, and so on.

Swallows are sociable and often gather in large flocks. They spend a great deal of their time in the air; nearly all of their food is captured on the wing. These swallows are a familiar sight in rural areas (following the farmers as they plough and catching the insects stirred up by their progress) but not so much in the Keys.

Both males and females share in the construction of the nest, which sometimes takes the two birds eight full 14-hour days to complete. The nests are usually constructed of mud mixed with straw, grasses, or horsehair, and cemented to the vertical surfaces of old beams or rafters. Where a flat surface or crevice is available, the cement is omitted.

The author swims out to rescue an overmatched osprey in the Keys. Below, a heron is released into the mangroves after rehab.

The barn swallow is found throughout much of the world and is resident on all the continents except Australia. It is easily distinguished from other American swallows by its deeply forked tail and rust colored "underpants." The barn swallow's aerial maneuvering is unexcelled. It can effortlessly make sharp turns while flying at high speed, enabling it to catch flies and other insects on the wing and in great numbers. When feeding, the swallows fly from before dawn to after sunset with only infrequent rests.

Barn swallows usually nest in small colonies and also hunt together. When a cat or other predator approaches their nesting site, the entire colony immediately mobs the intruder in an impressive display of aerial acrobatics. Most of their hunting is done near ground level, over open fields and especially near water. However, often, on late summer afternoons, they can be seen hunting high in the air. They simply follow the insects, which, in turn, may be reacting to differences in air temperature.

If you find a bird in trouble, please call EWBR at 872-1982.

HUMANA MILITARY HEALTHCARE SERVICESBENEFICIARY SERVICES REPRESENTATIVE (Customer Service) Key West, FL Office

Humana Military Healthcare Services, HMHS, is a subsidiary of Humana Inc., one of the nation's largest health insurance companies. As the TRICARE program administrator for the South Region of the United States, Humana Military provides health care benefits for more than 2.7 million of the nation's active duty and their family members, and military retirees and retirees' family members.

The BSR will represent HMHS in a professional manner to TRICARE beneficiaries in person. Responsibilities include providing clear and concise education including conducting face-to-face briefings concerning the TRICARE medical benefits and government policies and procedures and assisting beneficiaries with benefit information, claims, provider locations and other TRICARE issues. Our Department of Defense contract requires U.S. citizenship for this position.

The position requirements are:

- High School Diploma or GED
- 3 years experience in public contact position including making presentations to groups
- Demonstrated ability to analyze information, research problems and determine solutions
- Ability to handle high volume of customer contacts in a polite and professional manner

Please apply on line at www.humana.com/careers and attach your resume to the Beneficiary Services Representative. We offer an excellent benefits package, including immediate health/dental coverage, 3 weeks of vacation, retirement programs and tuition assistance, to name a few!
